Enjoy these free online resources to help with college planning

Wells Fargo’s CollegeSTEPS® program

wellsfargo.com/collegesteps
Students and parents can both sign up for our CollegeSTEPS program to stay on track with college planning. You’ll receive emails on topics like study tips, financial aid, and campus visits.

Your financial aid journey in 5 steps eBook and videos

wellsfargo.com/fivesteps
Journey through the financial aid process with Mr. Fellows and Monty. Through the interactive eBook and videos, you’ll get help sorting out the different options to pay for college expenses, including information on how to compare award letters.

Tuition Funding Sources (TFS) scholarship search

tuitionfundingsources.com
Save time searching for scholarships with the TFS scholarship database. Create a personal profile, and receive filtered results that match your education and career goals. With TFS, you’ll have access to over 7 million scholarships totaling more than $41 billion to help pay for college, plus information on financial aid and career assessment tools.

My Financial Guide

wellsfargo.com/financial-education
Get help managing your money before and during college using My Financial Guide. You’ll find articles and resources to help you learn more about saving for college, preparing for college costs, repaying your student loans, and more.

First Generation Go College Now! website and film

gocollegenow.org
Coming soon! Resources designed for first generation college students, as well as the educators and organizations who support them. Visit the website to see the award-winning First Generation film and learn how you can take the pledge to help more students become the first in their families to go to college.
School counselors: Help your students plan and prepare for college

With school back in session, your students are likely gearing up for an exciting new year of possibilities. Whether they realize it or not, the work they’re doing now — both in the classroom and in their extracurricular activities — is shaping their future success, first as college students and later as community members.

Because college is such a critical step in their journey, Wells Fargo would like to share a selection of free resources to help you help your students plan and prepare for college.

- Planning for college guide
  Enclosed is this helpful guide that walks students through the college planning process and provides a place where students can keep track of important information.

- CollegeSTEPS® magazine
  Also enclosed is a magazine that provides students and parents with college planning tips, tools, and resources, as well as information on building credit and money management.

The free Planning for college guide and the CollegeSTEPS magazine are available while supplies last. To order yours, contact me today!

Craig Ader

Craig Ader
Market Relationship Manager
Wells Fargo
414-217-5004
craigj.ader@wellsfargo.com

More resources on the back!

- Post on your school’s website
- Copy to share with students and parents

Want to schedule a financial education or college planning workshop?

We have several workshops available though our nationally-recognized Hands on Banking® financial education program. Contact me today to discuss what options might fit the needs of your students and their families.